HEALTH AND SAFETY MATTERS

David Roberts

Director, Management and Leadership Programmes
The Management Centre

'Making Health and Safety Matter – Leadership, Management or What?'

David joined The Management Centre in November 2007 to oversee and develop a range of professional management and leadership programmes. David initially started his career as an engineering apprentice in light engineering and ship building. After completing this he was employed as a Project Mechanical Design Engineer working for an automotive related industry, before moving into aluminum processing holding various managerial posts within Maintenance and Engineering, up to Senior Engineer level. During the early nineties he moved into the commercial and process areas, providing him with hands-on management experience at operational and strategic level.

In 2004 David moved into further education as a lecturer in business studies, lecturing a wide range of management and leadership courses up to Honours Degree Level, as well as writing a number of business start-up courses focusing on entrepreneurship and business development. His passion together with his global and industrial operational and strategic experience has focused his energy to provide professional practical support and encouragement to managers and leaders alike to enable them to be flexible and well prepared to adapt to change.
