'How to be Waste Smart'

Rebecca Colley-Jones, Prifysgol Bangor University

THE SPEAKER

Rebecca is a Circular Economy and Resources Specialist for The Sustainability Lab at Bangor University and Director of Ynys Resources Ltd.

With over 19 years in the Waste and Resources industry, she has a wealth of experience working in a practical and mentoring role to develop innovative ideas and solutions. She started in landfill as a consultant Environmental Engineer responsible for CQA, leachate and gas management plans. Awareness of the scale of wasted resources saw her move to the development of markets for recyclables. Keen to be part of the drive for innovation to improve these markets, she joined Bangor University as the WISE Network coordinator where she successfully bridged the gap between business and research, delivering effective waste and resources management and sustainable solutions to business and ensuring partnerships between academia and the business and wider community.

As previous Chair of CIWM she is well connected in the Welsh waste and resources sector. Rebecca sits on a number of Technical Expert groups and steering groups helping to implement and develop Welsh policy. Embracing the challenges presented in developing a more resource efficient future, she has had a natural progression towards a circular thinking approach. Rebecca is an accredited Wastesmart trainer, registered BREEAM Assessor and holds an MBA in Environmental Management.

Buffet will be provided from 1.30pm.
Talk starts at 2.00pm.
